Even though there are some peeks here and there, the Arrabam team has handled it to the fullest. Suba, the duo of writers Suresh and Balakrishnan wrote an engrossing script for Arrambam and lured the audience to their places with a more captivating script. Yuvan Shankar Raja's background scores could not have had an impact, so did Ajith's sound. However, he added enough seriousness to the action sequences with his score. The songs 'Adada Arrambame', 'Mela Vedikkudhu' and 'En Fuse Pochu' are good on screen in support of chamber work. Om Prakash, the debut filmmaker, proved his courage to be here in Kollywood with his pleasant visual eyes in battle scenes and songs. Stunt choreographers Jegan, Kecha and Lee Whittaker need a tap for numerous parts of action, especially the climax and boat chase are appealing. Analysis: Ajith and Vishnuvardhan on board with their trusted team of Arrabam, who strap a soak connection with movies like Sword Fish, O Wednesday and Indian, well they just remained shades. The film has a start with the foot with never thought fashionable entry by Thala Ajith, followed by the first half racy. Arrabam The second half has more interesting parts compared to the first, as the actual plot is revealed here. The characters of Arya, Nayantara, Tapsee and Rana leave an impact on the audience. So said before Arya that tech savvy reminds you of A Wednesday, Arrabam climax similar to The Indian's Kamal Haasan film and real plot alike like Sword Fish. Totally Arrambam is a custom action packed bouncy show, but you shouldn't think about logic because it is commercially best spoken for fans. Final verdict: Diwali Arraramam with a class + Ajith table and team on board ...
